If there was a nuclear war - what would you do?

This was the question millions of people faced 50 years ago. In October 1962 the world stood on the brink of nuclear annihilation. During the Cuban Missile Crisis the United States had 65 nuclear bombers in the air, Russia prepared to launch atomic missiles, and Britain was in the front line.

Five decades later, we still live with the nuclear weapons of the Cold War. 1,700 of them are constantly ready for use at a few minutes’ notice. The number one target in Britain is Faslane submarine base, 25 miles from the centre of Glasgow.

The most dangerous moment in human history
Saturday 27 October

Fifty years ago the world stood on the brink of nuclear annihilation. In 1962 the Soviet Union placed nuclear missiles on Cuba. On 27 October the United States was on the verge of bombing the island. New information shows that the dangers of nuclear war were even greater than people realised at the time.

Find out more about the Cuban Missile Crisis and the risks from nuclear weapons today.

Wellington Church Hall (next to SCND office)
77 Southpark Avenue, Hillhead, Glasgow.
10.00 am to 1 pm Saturday 27 October 2012

Speakers: John Ainslie (Scottish CND) and Kath Campbell (Scottish Cuba Solidarity). Plus discussion, personal reminiscences and short films. Free. All welcome.

Scottish CND banthebomb.org 0141 357 1529

How to make a fallout shelter inside your house.
(Protect and Survive)

Find out more at:
banthebomb.org

Sign up on the online map:
aenuclear.org

Scottish Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament
77 Southpark Avenue,
Glasgow, G12 8LE.