Mordechai Vanunu is a former nuclear technician who has been incarcerated in prison for the last 18 years for revealing details about Israel's nuclear arms programme. He had been working at the Dimona nuclear research centre in the Negev desert for nine years when he decided to leave. He then published photographs and details of Israel's nuclear capacity in the world's press which led to his kidnapping by Israeli intelligence service Mossad and a long jail sentence. He was released after spending more than 11 years in solitary confinement on 21st April 2004 but is not allowed to leave Israel and has been forbidden to speak to any foreign friends, relatives or media.
