18 September 2014
an opportunity to ban the bomb?

The Prime Minister plans to spend £100 billion of taxpayers’ money on new nuclear weapons. He wants to base them in Scotland for the next 50 years.

The Scottish referendum in 2014 will be a chance to end to this waste of money and to bring about nuclear disarmament in Britain because,

- All British nuclear weapons are based in Scotland, on Trident submarines at Faslane.
- The constitution of an independent Scotland will ban nuclear weapons.
- It would be very difficult for the Ministry of Defence to build a new Trident base in England.

Scottish independence will, almost certainly, mean there will be no nuclear weapons in the British Isles. Scotland can set an example to the rest of the world.

There are many issues that people will consider when they decide how to vote in 2014, but getting rid of nuclear weapons is one reason to vote YES.

To find out more about Trident and how the independence referendum will be an opportunity to achieve nuclear disarmament go to banthebomb.org

Tel 0141 357 1529
Email scnd@banthebomb.org
Twitter: @ScottishCND
Facebook: Scottish CND

Promoted by John Ainslie on behalf of the Scottish Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, both of 77 Southpark Avenue, Glasgow, G12 8LE. Printed by Fasprint, 3 Ailsa Road, Irvine. (Tartan CND logo: basvanderschot.com)